Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.
Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.
Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The objective of the Class Fund is to provide a return in excess of its benchmark in Sterling, whilst seeking to maintain a high degree of capital preservation, by investing primarily in quality global fixed interest securities, and, where in the opinion of the Investment Manager, direct investment in fixed interest securities will not achieve sufficient diversification to achieve the Class Fund's objective, in other collective schemes, money market instruments and cash that will maximise total returns in Sterling.
The Fund posted a negative return in the third quarter, underperforming its benchmark.

Market overview

The third quarter's surge in the oil price has again heightened inflationary concerns, pushing global government bond yields to fresh multi-year highs with the US treasury 10-year yield breaching the key resistance level of 5% for the first time since 2007. Forecasting over the short-term remains incredibly difficult as the ongoing war in Iran and intrinsically linked moves in the oil price remain highly unpredictable, at best. Many major central banks have been forced to respond to markedly higher energy prices with tighter monetary policy, notably the US Federal Reserve (Fed) and the European Central Bank (ECB), the latter of which has now hiked by a total of 50 basis points since June. Although we have our doubts that higher interest rates will do little to move the dial on the oil price. Despite the current 'inflation angst', the market's longer-term outlook remains more positive with US five-year inflation expectations below 2.5% and the oil futures curve in backwardation (downward sloping) suggesting a retracement to roughly $80 a barrel a year from now. Time will tell if either are correct, if they are then yields at current levels are becoming increasingly attractive on a medium to long-term outlook, even if economic growth remains strong.

Looking ahead

The Bank of England (BOE) have maintained interest rates at 3.75% over the quarter, however uncertainty created by the ongoing US-Iran war and volatile energy prices led to a warning from the BOE Governor that a hike may be required if inflationary pressures intensify. UK inflation has been driven by higher energy prices which initially was thought to be a short-term headwind, but with oil rallying strongly again in the quarter, the markets have been quick to price in tighter policy in the quarters ahead. However, domestic price pressures are easing more quickly than predicted, one of the reasons why the BOE are content to sit on their hands, for now. Elsewhere in the economy there are signs of slack, most notably in the employment market. Whilst unemployment has held steady, albeit elevated, throughout the year, currently at 4.9%, the weak economic backdrop is reducing the risk of inflation becoming entrenched in wages, which should limit 'second round' inflationary effects. Secondly, whilst overall domestic economic growth (GDP) is proving moderately more resilient than expected, it is certainly not at levels usually associated with tighter monetary policy. The OECD recently downgraded its growth estimate to a mere 1.1% for 2026, hence the 'on hold' monetary policy. If Middle East tensions persist, it is possible that the BOE may be forced to tighten monetary policy, but any moves would probably be limited as the economy would struggle further under a restrictive higher rate regime. For this reason, should the BOE raise rates we would view this is a positive for the bond market which would be quick to price in a more permanent slowdown in economic growth conditions.

Relative to the underlying benchmark, the manager has continued to add to duration in the AAA/government exposure which now stands overweight by approximately one year. Ten-year government bond yields have climbed over 100 basis points since the onset of the US-Iran war, driven by sharply higher oil prices to which the UK's inflation rate is highly correlated. Whilst the short-term inflation outlook remains highly unpredictable and investors will have to tolerate ongoing bouts of volatility, the manager views the sharp rise in government bond yields as over-extended and offering attractive medium to long-term value. Exposure to Investment Grade (IG) debt, predominantly via highly liquid Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) has been maintained in line with the composite benchmark, although underweight duration on a relative basis. We continue to wait for a more attractive opportunity to increase both the overall weighting and duration given that credit spreads remain at or near the lower end of a multi-year trading range. The Fund's modest 'off benchmark' weighting to High Yield (HY) debt has delivered returns broadly in line with the corporate benchmark in the quarter following a meaningful outperformance over previous years.
