Fund review

Equity markets globally have made a very good start to the year, closing their best quarter since 2009 with positive double digit returns, after a poor performance in Q4 2018. The fund was up 7% for the quarter and 2.2% for March. Resources continued their strong run from 2018, gaining 18% within the fund for the quarter. There were strong performances from both Anglo American and BHP. The rand hedge component benefited from strong equity returns and currency weakness. The best performers for the quarter were BAT, up 29.5%, and Anheuser-Busch, up 26.7%. Real Estate had a better quarter, with an 8% recovery in Nepi Rockcastle. Financials delivered a mixed quarter, with banks and life insurers coming under pressure. Some of the cheaper Financials post-2018, such as Coronation Fund Managers Limited and Quilter Plc, had a very strong start to the year. The Industrial component of the portfolio came under pressure because of GDP concerns caused by Eskom's challenges. AVI shares weakened as results disappointed, largely reflecting pressure on the SA consumer.

Market overview

Although the JSE ALSI index provided investors with a very healthy 8% return over the quarter, the index lagged global and emerging markets as domestic growth remains lacklustre. The bounce in equities seemed to be driven by an improvement in the global risk appetite, with the US Federal Reserve turning more dovish, as well as by perceived progress in the trade talks between the US and China. Valuations at the end of 2018 had also become compelling.

The good news for government and SA as a whole was that Moody's left SA's sovereign rating and outlook unchanged. This should restore some stability to the value of the rand and SA government bonds. Business and consumer confidence levels remain depressed and have worsened since the beginning of the year, but other economic indicators such as consumer lending, retail sales and employment figures suggest that the worst might be behind us. The ALSI's returns continue to be dominated by a strong performance from the Resources sector, where the level of outperformance during the past 12 months is noteworthy. Platinum stocks in particular have done exceptionally well. The prices of many rand hedge stocks have bounced backed strongly from the oversold levels reached towards the end of last year. These include BAT, ABL, Richemont and Naspers, providing welcome relief for many SA investors. The performance of domestic-orientated stocks was disappointing; with the Retail sector taking the brunt of the pain.

Looking ahead

The SARB started the year with a very dovish statement and benign inflation outlook in its January meeting and again in its last meeting at the end of March. In both meetings the bank left rates unchanged at 6.75%. President Cyril Ramaphosa, in his State of the Nation address in early February, outlined very bold plans to boost the economy, deal with graft, and promised to tackle governance issues at most state-owned enterprises, which have become a drain on the fiscus. SA remains constrained by very high real interest rates, with low levels of investment and job creation, caused by policy uncertainty and fiscal constraints. In addition, high real increases in utility bills and transport costs are placing enormous pressures on the consumer. The struggles are real and the trading updates and results that we have seen confirm the tough environment. From a valuation perspective, domestic equities reflect reasonable value, given the rally over the last quarter. Risks remain and diversification is paramount.
